Your landlord is suing you for eviction.

1. Your landlord has started a holdover eviction case against you. That means the landlord says you should be evicted for a reason other than not paying your rent. The landlord's reasons are given in the attached Petition.
2. Your landlord is asking this Court for:
 - permission to evict you from your home at

Address or description of the premises

- and a money judgment for $ _____ plus interest from _____, 20__.

3. You must come to the Civil Court:

Date: _____ Time: _____

Address: _____, New York

Room/Part: _____

Warning! If you don't come to court at this date and time, a judgment may be entered against you. If that happens, the landlord will have the right to evict you. You have a right to postpone the case for 14 days, but you have to come to court to ask for that.

4. In court, you may tell the judge the legal reasons that you should be allowed to stay in your home. The legal reasons are called defenses. You can also say any claims you have against the landlord. You will have to prove your defenses and claims in court. You can also give your Answer in writing.

Information to help you Answer the Petition is available online at nycourts.gov/housingnyc.

Important! If you don't tell the Clerk about a defense in your Answer you might not be able to talk about it later in this case or any other case.

5. If your name is not on this Notice but you live in the home listed above, you have a right to come to Court on the court date and tell the judge the legal reasons that you should be allowed to stay in the home.
